

FURMAN'S ANNUAL CLEARING AND CASH DISCOUNT SALE OF MEDIUM AND Fine Footwear

Great bargains offered during this sale. Prices cut on many kinds of "Special Lots," in broken sizes below actual cost. Ten Per Cent Discount on all Cash Purchases during this sale, except the "Special Lots" named below. Now is the time to buy the best footwear at greatly reduced prices. Below we quote prices on a few of the special bargains we have in store for you:

	Former Price	Sale Price
100 pairs Ladies' Kid Button Boots	$2.50	$2.00
60 pairs Ladies' Kid Button Boots	3.00	2.50
75 pairs Ladies' Fine Kid Button Boots	4.00	3.00
50 pairs Ladies' Fine Kid Button Boots	5.00	3.50
80 pairs Men's Lace and Congress Shoes	2.50	2.00
48 pairs Men's Gulf Lace and Congress Shoes	3.00	2.50
80 pairs Men's Fine Lace and Congress Shoes	6.00	4.00
60 pairs Men's Fine Lace and Congress Shoes, hand-made	7.00	5.00
100 pairs Ladies' Rubbers	4.00	2.50

Our price is plainly marked on every pair of shoes. You can see the amount saved by purchasing during this sale.

Furman,

604 Kan. Ave.

A DEMENTED BOY.

His Case Being Heard in the Probate Court Today.

In the probate court this afternoon Birch Adams, a North Toledo boy who has been arrested numerous times for stealing, is being tried for larceny.

Mrs. Adams, the boy's mother, says he is demented, he emitted a long sough of tears a few years ago. He has frequently threatened to kill himself and other members of the family. He runs away from home and sometimes stays away several months at a time. In the neighborhood where he lives he is considered a mad dog.

Law—The jury adjuged him insane and he will be sent to the asylum this afternoon.

BRIGANDAGE IN SPAIN.

People Carried Off and Held For Ransom By Bandits.

Montevideo, Jan. 19.—The authorities of Collo declare themselves unable to cope with the agrarian outrage unless work is provided for the unemployed.

A band of men recently entered the village of Sestao, in the Cadiz district, and took a rich farmer, whom they took to the mountains to hold him a prisoner until a heavy ransom was paid. It is reported that a detachment of mounted gendarmes have succeeded in rescuing the farmer.

Another farmer whose father and wife were kidnapped and taken to the hills until a ransom could be obtained, was so overcome by grief that he committed suicide.

A band of naked men invaded the village of Edessa, and pillaged it of all its money, clothes and drinkables which it contained. The notorious bandit chief, Martin, long known as the terror of Spain, has also been found unmasked to death by his own son.

The general opinion seems to be that the notorious outlaw was murdered by some of the members of the band, whom he had cheated out of the proceeds of one or more robberies.

The government authorities are taking steps to prevent brigandage in the district of Cadiz. There is little doubt that the recent outrages may be traced to anarchist agitation.

DEFENDED HIS LIFE.

A Negro Shoots Two of a Mob But is Afterward Lynched.

New Orleans, Jan. 18.—A white man was killed and a white boy seriously injured in a successful attempt to lynch a negro in West Feliciana parish, night before last.

The negro was accused of firing a gun at the Givenswood plantation and a mob to lynch him, proceeded to lynch cabin. When the negro heard them he opened fire and killed a plantation hand named Roberts, wounding a son of the proprietor, Reed, of the plantation. The infuriated crowd broke in the door, dragged out the negro, strung him up and riddled him with bullets.

Sheriff Burdette was this morning notified of a mysterious fire which occurred near New Orleans Tuesday night. The large barn of Joseph Young two miles south-west of New Orleans was entirely destroyed about midnight together with two tons of hay and seven head of horses. The fire is believed to have been the work of an incendiary, but Mr. Long is not known to have an enemy in the vicinity.

Speakers, singers and actors use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, also, Ayer's Almond.

POTPOURRI

Stories Told by Lamont and Congressman Bryan.

Bad Manners of Washington Society Women.

TONGUE OF SCANDAL

A Western Woman Disgusted With Washington.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 19.—[Special.] In his tariff speech a few days ago Congressman Bryan of Nebraska told a story of the late presidential campaign which greatly amused the house. "I was in the city of New York making some campaign addresses," said Mr. Bryan, "speaking in little ward halls and sometimes from wagons hauled up at street corners. In one of these speeches I made an effort to impress my hearers with the magnitude of this country. I had perceived that they were a characteristic New York audience, to whom the sun rose in Brooklyn and set in Hoboken. They had no idea of there being anything in this country except New York and its immediate surroundings. The great Mississippi valley and the boundless west beyond that were a terra incognita to them. Probably not one in a hundred of them had ever been outside Manhattan Island. But I told them a good deal about the rest of the country whence I talk about the prairies, the grazing plains, the mountains, the mining camps. I painted the glories of America in glowing colors as I could, with an idea of impressing them with the importance of having legislation not for a section alone, but for the whole country, and when I finished this description I thought to prove what sort of an impression, and so sang out, "My friends, where is the center of population in this country anyway?"

"Bleeker street and Broadway" was the response in a loud voice, and as soon as possible I changed the subject. That is the way with these New Yorkers. They can't get away from Broadway. Their mental vision in business politics and everything else is bounded by this East and North river.

Secretary Lamont's Story.

Secretary Lamont tells a neat story about one of his little girls. The child had been in the habit of annoying herself and bother the servants of the Lamont house by whistling down the speaking tubes. A few days ago she went out to drive with some friends of the secretary's, one of whom was an elderly lady who is afflicted with deafness and who carries an ear trumpet with her wherever she goes. When the little Lamont saw the trumpet at the ear of her fellow passenger, she at once concluded it was a new sort of speaking tube and proceeded to put her mouth to it and gave vent to a prolonged whistle, a method of communication which the sound proved the owner of the trumpet did not at all relish. [Applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact when he charged him with it? [Renewed applause.]

The gentleman had been so hard pressed," continued Mr. Johnson, "that he had begged in his wicked partner, Arthur J. Moaklin. Mr. Moaklin, although not a naturalized citizen," said he, "when the flood at Johnstown left 12,000 in the water and 2,000 drowned, was shown electric. He fed the living and buried the dead. [Applause.]

"It was also true that he had purchased an engine in England, because he could not get it here until five months after Mr. Dulzett had alluded. But the first thing he had done the next day was to informed Mr. Dulzett of that fact. [Prolonged Democratic applause.]

"Was it fair?" he inquired, "for the gentleman from Pennsylvania not to mention that fact